

Aisha Brown, M.Ed and Author
Executive Director of The Butterfly Literacy Group

Hello!

I think it's important to note that I'm a dreamer. I believe that I come from the greatest family in the world, who encouraged me to reach for my dreams. We just didn't have the resources to make them happen. I spent a lot of time writing, but not many people will ever know about those writings. When I became a teacher nine years ago. I wanted to give students the opportunity to be creative and practice dreaming. It wasn't always possible in my classroom, so I started writing with girls after school, in a program that I created called G.E.W.L (sounds like jewel). It means Girls Empowered to Write Literature. The program started in 2013 and usually has about 10-15 girls each semester. Out of this program, the non-profit organization, The Butterfly Literacy Group was born, in 2017. G.E.W.L was placed under that umbrella, because the plan is to write with boys too. A little more about me.

I am:

- An author
 - I've written 3 Christian Fiction books: Changes: A story of Transformation, Transformed, and Taking Flight
- A ghostwriter (I write books for other people)
- A blogger

I look forward to working with you and your children. I hope the creative writing courses they participate in encourages and empowers them to be more confident in themselves as writers.