Writer and Art Advocate

As an emerging writer, Michelle Hill has been inspired by her hometown of Kansas City, KS and her travels across the country over the past 10 years. She has explored her talents through poetry, short stories and building her online platform spotlighting local Black artists on the rise, The Black Sunflower. She holds a Bachelor of Arts degree in English from the first Historically Black College, Cheyney University of Pennsylvania.

Michelle is excited to bring her years of experience as a corporate trainer into a fun, innovative classroom setting for children in the community. She strives to encourage critical thinking skills, social relevancy, and the power of literacy through the lens of Black writers across genres.
